Annual Report 27
Dear Lamplighter Community,

Last month after the incredible Carnival – Under the Big Top, I was reminded of the lyrics from Rent: “Five hundred twenty-five thousand six hundred minutes….How do you measure a year? In daylights, in sunsets, in midnights, in cups of coffee…how do you measure a year?”

We began the fall season at Lamplighter just as the lyrics to the popular song brilliantly express…with lots of laughter, smiles, hard work, and deep respect for the school of which we are so fond. A special thank you to Carmen Yung, Brenna Lambert, Stefanie Nielson and members of their committees for organizing an event that will be remembered for many years to come; reunions and gatherings that include alums, parents, and grandparents connect us and help to shape childhood and arguably adulthood.

It has been a great start to the school year. We are indeed living out the mission of the school that so clearly states that Lamplighter is dedicated to igniting the potential of each student. Over 60 years ago, the founders of Lamplighter subscribed to the philosophy of John Dewey, best known as the father of modern education. Dewey, the Lamplighter founders, and thousands of others believed, like all of us, that school must engage the mind, hands, and heart of the child.

Many will remember that in 2012, the school community participated in developing the five-year Strategic Plan. Surveys were taken and meetings were held as we worked together to plan for the future. The entire document (available on the website) set a very high bar for continuing to build and sustain the Lamplighter environment both academically and in the physical space or infrastructure. Our planning over the last few years has been targeted and intentional. In May, the Board of Trustees voted to move forward on a Campaign that will be centered on People, Place, and Program.

In the area of people, our goal is to ensure that we continue to have the strongest faculty with access to the best professional development possible in order to bring new knowledge to our students. Our teachers are asked regularly to serve on reaccreditation teams for other schools, to speak at conferences, and to participate in workshops. It is an honor for members of the faculty to have the opportunity to join colleagues and, in many cases, lead the effort.

In the area of place, we are investigating the possibility of a new building as well as planning to make enhancements to our main building. The opportunity to build a space for science classes and project work is exciting to envision. And, finding a location for teaching Early Childhood Spanish is certainly an aspiration that we endorse. Over the next few months we will further crystalize the vision, but be assured that all of these efforts are focused on enhancing the Lamplighter experience for our students now and in the future.

In the area of programs, we are committed to the partnerships we are building. The connections to the Perot Museum of Nature and Science, SMU, Commit! and The Dallas Arboretum deepen the student experience and provide authentic learning. It is exciting to observe how teaching and learning are being transformed and how new opportunities abound as a result of our work with these important cultural institutions.

Lamplighter is a magical place. We offer a serious education wrapped in the wonder of childhood.

Sincerely,

Joan Buchanan Hill, Ed. D.

Q & A with the New Board Chair

This interview with Catherine Rose, Lamplighter Board Chair and former parent, was conducted and condensed by LampPost.

LP: What are you most excited about for Lamplighter in the 2014–15 school year?

CR: Lamplighter is about the people—the special students, of course, but also the families, faculty, and leadership who care deeply about the school’s mission; and it’s also about the unique program. The energy around the Lamplighter experience is palpable around campus—the Carnival was a huge success and an indication of how people feel about the school. I’m excited about the enthusiasm and energy at school and all the work that the school is doing on the Strategic Plan.

LP: Has the Board of Trustees set goals for the 2014–15 school year?

CR: For the past several years, the Board of Trustees has set annual goals early in each school year. During our full board training session in late August, Governance Chair Sarah Weinberg led a goal-setting exercise in which all participated. This school year the Board will focus on four objectives: trustee engagement, financial sustainability, advocacy and oversight in advancing the work of the School’s mission and Strategic Plan.

LP: Lamplighter is midway through its Strategic Plan—how is it going so far?

CR: Dr. Hill and her team of capable staff and accomplished faculty have been making deliberate progress on the Strategic Plan, as well as the Academic Plan. For instance, one goal of the plan is to broaden external and internal awareness about Lamplighter and its programs. Last year, Dr. Hill and her team initiated and completed a thorough branding process which resulted in a new logo, a refined identity about the school, and a really terrific new website which I hope all parents are using! Those successes are just a few ways we are evaluating progress against the goals of the plan.

Another goal of the Strategic Plan ensures that Lamplighter’s facilities deliver on the plan’s programmatic goals—as well as the mission. Toward that goal, the Board of Trustees and Dr. Hill have been taking a hard look at aligning form and function on campus—all focused on enhancing our students’ experiences. This fall, the Board and Dr. Hill are refining the scope and precise needs of the campus, and we expect to share specific plans later this school year.

LP: How often does the Board evaluate the School’s progress on the Strategic Plan?

CR: The Strategic Initiatives committee, chaired by Jane Hurst, is charged with reviewing the progress on the Strategic Plan on an annual basis. Each summer, Dr. Hill and her team update the plan for progress and address the work for the following school year. Each of the Strategic Plan’s goals and objectives are accompanied by measurable outcomes and responsibility is assigned to Dr. Hill or specific members of her leadership team. Some of the action items are completed in a single school year, and other objectives require much longer timelines to accomplish. It is a tremendous amount of work, but so valuable for the school in keeping all efforts focused on the vision of the plan.

LP: Your children are Lamplighter graduates and now in middle and high school. Why did you want to serve as Board Chair—or why is the Lamplighter Board and School still important to you?

CR: I wish I had attended Lamplighter! All of the boys—Will included—attended Lamplighter, and I’m just so jealous of their experiences. The school’s mission, “Dedicated to igniting the potential of each child, Lamplighter engages children in the joy of learning through intellectual discovery in a creative, inclusive, and collaborative environment,” speaks deeply to me about the importance of early childhood education and the need to kindle the wonder in each child. It is also a specific approach that fosters interest from within that I believe to be critical for future success in life. It is such a pleasure to watch our three Lamplighter grads—Alex, Charlie, and Jack—as they grow as students and lifelong learners.
New Trustees On Board

Liza Lee
Liza brings over 40 years of experience in independent schools. Most recently, she was Head of School at Columbus School for Girls in Columbus, Ohio, where she served as Head from 2009–2014. Liza served as Headmistress of The Hockaday School from 1990–2004, and also served as Interim Head of School at Trinity Episcopal School in Austin, Texas, and Porter-Gaud School in Charleston, South Carolina. In addition, Liza also served as a board member for numerous independent schools as well as the National Association of Independent Schools (NAIS). Liza received a bachelor’s degree in English magna cum laude from Mt. Holyoke College and a master’s degree in English from Columbia University. She and her husband, Dr. William Lee, have three grown children, sons Matthew and Ted, and daughter Caroline.

Douglas MacMahon
Douglas is a Managing Member of Moran Capital, LLC, a privately held real estate investment company. Prior to founding Moran in 2011, Doug was a Managing Member of Farallon Capital Management, LLC, a privately held investment advisor. He began his career working for Farallon in San Francisco and relocated to New York to open a new office for the company. Doug received a bachelor’s degree from the College of Business Administration at the University of Texas and currently serves as a member of the Associate Council for the Real Estate Finance and Investment Center at the McCombs School of Business. Doug and his wife, Catherine, have been married for 10 years and are the proud parents of three children, Lamplighter Kindergarteners, Andrew and Carter, and 2-year old Lollie.

Greg Marquess
Greg joins the Board as the Lamplighter Alumni Council President for 2014–2015. He has been a member of the Council for 10 years. Greg is a proud graduate of the class of ’79 and has four siblings, all of whom attended Lamplighter. Greg graduated from Lakehill Preparatory School and later attended UNT where he earned a bachelor’s degree in business administration. In 1999, he founded Skintrigue, Inc. which distributes medical-grade dermatology products. His dedication to and love for the School has remained with him throughout his life. In 1991, he volunteered to coach the Lamplighter Sharks, a kindergarten girls soccer team. Greg enjoyed the experience so much that he continued coaching the same group of girls through their fourth grade year.

Jed Morse
Jed Morse is Chief Curator at the Nasher Sculpture Center where he has organized, overseen, or assisted with numerous exhibitions since 2002. In addition to his duties at the Nasher, Mr. Morse has contributed to exhibition projects, such as Barcelona and Modernity: Picasso, Gaudi, Miró, Dali (Cleveland Museum of Art and Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, 2006), and has lectured widely on a variety of topics. Jed received his bachelor’s degree with honors in art history from Middlebury College and his master’s in Modern Art History from the University of Texas at Austin. Jed is a Lamplighter alumnus who went on to graduate from St. Mark’s School of Texas. He and his wife, Dr. Margaret Morse, have two children, Sam (5), a kindergartener at Lamplighter, and Meg (3), a potential future Lamplighter student.
Kristin Rees
Kristin has been involved in the Lamplighter Annual Fund for six years and served as co-chair for three of those years. She also served on the Advancement Committee and co-chaired the LPA’s Community Outreach Committee. Kristin received her bachelor’s degree from SMU and her Master’s of Business Administration from The University of Texas. After business school, Kristin spent several years in management consulting before pursuing entrepreneurial roles with two start-up companies. Most recently, she was Chief Operating Officer of a hedge fund. Kristin and her husband, Ricky, have three Lamplighter girls: Gabriella is a 2014 graduate, Alex is in the class of 2016, and Sofia will graduate Lamplighter in 2019.

Jean-Louis Trochu
Jean-Louis (JL) Trochu is a vice president at Texas Instruments where he leads TI’s corporate development and venture capital team. He joins the Lamplighter Board of Trustees as an alumni parent. He and Cynthia are the proud parents of Claire (a 2012 Lamplighter alumna) now in seventh grade at The Hockaday School, and of Jack (Lamplighter Class of 2014), a fifth grader at Episcopal School of Dallas. Jean-Louis was born and raised in Nantes, France. He graduated from the EM Lyon (France) and has a Master’s of Business Administration from The University of Chicago Booth School. Jean-Louis is also a vice president on the Board of Directors of the DFW French-American Chamber of Commerce; he previously served as Treasurer.

Carmen Yung
Carmen Yung is mom to Lamplighter kindergartener Andie and Lamplighter alumna Sophia. Born in Panama and raised in East Texas, Carmen studied International Relations at Tufts University and University College London and then returned to Texas to study law at SMU School of Law. She practiced law for 16 years, primarily in the areas of real estate and corporate law. Recently, she shifted gears away from law to spend more time with her family and pursue other interests, including volunteering at Lamplighter. She and her husband, Andy, enjoy travelling and outdoor adventures with their girls.
Lamplighter has been fostering a relationship with Southern Methodist University over the past three years. Working with the Dean of SMU’s Annette Caldwell Simmons School of Education and Human Development, Dr. David Chard, Lamplighter is committed to implementing the current best practices in the field of education.

“The future of innovation in schools rests with strong partnerships with universities, museums, and foundations, as this is where much of the new thinking is initiated,” explained Dr. Joan Hill, Lamplighter’s Head of School. She believes the partnerships the School continues to build strengthen the School’s curriculum and community in multiple ways. “Firstly, our students have opportunities for hands-on learning which is emblematic of the Lamplighter experience. Secondly, our faculty has a chance for professional renewal through rich dialogue with others in our field. And lastly, the partnership with SMU has been especially important to ensure that Lamplighter is offering the very best instructional practices as we instill a love of learning.”

Administration and faculty agree that the Lamplighter partnership with SMU has been a valuable experience for teachers and ultimately for students. “At Lamplighter, we are continuing to improve our curriculum, enhancing what is good and making it better, and exploring ways to be innovative in our approach to educating young children,” said Vicki Raney, the School’s Assistant Head for Academics.
Lamplighter partners with SMU to strengthen the School's curriculum and best practices.
Strong literacy skill development is a focus of the Lamplighter curriculum. In a quest for continual and sustained improvement, reading and Spanish teachers have partnered with SMU faculty to revise lessons to better meet the needs of Lamplighter students. “Having rich collaborations with museums and universities are ways that our school measures how our academic program stands up to the latest research and best practices for teaching children,” Raney continued.

In recent years, Lamplighter has completed a thorough examination of its literacy curriculum, specifically how the School teaches reading. “We participate in the best professional development opportunities available,” Dr. Hill reported.

Fourth grade teacher Jody Stout believes Lamplighter’s stated commitment to engaging and igniting the spirit of life-long learners is a mission that extends to the whole of the community. “Partnering with SMU’s Simmons School of Education is one way Lamplighter teachers have access to progressive research and programming,” she explained.

Raney added that Lamplighter literacy teachers are continually making certain that students attain reading and writing skills needed to move forward. “Dr. Diane Gifford and Dr. Stephanie Al Otaiba guide us through assessments that are useful,” she said. “They share the most recent and relevant research on curriculum and instruction, as well as new resources that support our work.” Raney explained that the SMU partnership “gives us access to experts like Dr. Al Otaiba, who helped us better understand the components of an excellent reading program and the significance of increased time spent reading.”

According Dr. Al Otaiba, “The Lamplighter facilities, faculty, and leadership team amaze me.” She described how SMU is excited about such partnerships with schools. “During one of my visits, a doctoral student and I engaged with faculty around the topic of vocabulary building.” She said the knowledge level of Lamplighter faculty was already strong and that they were open to learning new strategies. “It was evident that the School’s culture is innovative and iterative.” She said one of her colleagues, Dr. Gifford, works with the faculty’s literacy team. “This year they are working on writing initiatives,” she expanded.

Dr. Gifford, a research specialist at SMU’s School of Education, also meets regularly with Lamplighter faculty so they can discuss various aspects of reading instruction. In turn, Gifford offers books and articles that support the School’s literacy curriculum. Gifford described the partnership as one that is beneficial for everyone. “I am thrilled to be able to work with these teachers and impart what I know about research to classroom practices. In order for ALL children to succeed and maximize their learning potential, there must be a shared system of responsibility between researchers and educators.” Gifford explained that SMU faculty is committed to bringing evidence-based practices to the classroom. “The responsiveness of the teachers and administrators at Lamplighter to learning about what works with children is exciting to see. I am thankful for the opportunity.”

Fellow faculty members are also supportive. Annie Jonas, a second grade teacher, explained that Lamplighter faculty meets with Gifford to discuss reading topics and questions “that are currently happening in our classrooms.” She explained that the School’s literacy teachers appreciate the resources. “From organizing lesson plans to analyzing data, we value Dr. Gifford’s guidance and support of our literacy curriculum.”

Teacher Stout believes regular workshops and resource exchanges with Dr. Gifford have provided teachers “with dynamic opportunities to both challenge and reinforce our own best practices,” she said.
“We are certain that our relationship with SMU strengthens our work each day and that our collaboration with professors such as Dr. Gifford reinforces our commitment to serious education,” Raney revealed.

Lamplighter is also working with SMU to improve its foreign language program with School of Education professor Dr. Doris Baker. “Keen observations and the vast experience of Dr. Baker provide us with insights that strengthen our Spanish program,” said Jezabel Guadalupe, Lamplighter’s Lower School Spanish teacher. “Her connection with a school in Santiago, Chile, is opening doors to another world for our students.”

Dr. Baker believes the partnership with Lamplighter has provided “a closer connection between research and practice.” She explained that frequently, the dissemination of research findings takes longer than expected, and it is difficult for practitioners to access that research and implement the findings in their classrooms. “This gap between research and practice is particularly acute when teaching children a second language,” she explained. “Thus, the partnership with Lamplighter provides the opportunity for researchers like me to share with their Spanish teachers what we know about teaching children a second language.” At the same time, Baker said she also benefits from the partnership “by learning firsthand what teachers are struggling with most, and how the research could be focused when trying to find answers to the teachers’ most pressing issues.”

Dr. Baker and Ms. Guadalupe worked on using content that students will already be learning in their science classes to teach words and sentences in Spanish. “Ms. Guadalupe and I discussed the fact that when students are already familiar with the content, it makes the learning of words in Spanish less demanding; following the research indicating that it is difficult for second language learners to focus on both the content and the language.”

She said the life cycle of butterflies is an example of faculty teaching words and sentences in Spanish as well as connecting students to cultural events in Latin American countries and Spain. “Ms. Guadalupe and I discussed the idea of children describing the life cycle of the Monarch butterflies that migrate to the state of Michoacán, Mexico, every year, as well as how the Monarch butterflies form part of the Day of the Dead celebration in Mexico.” She explained how, in this particular case, students would be learning the vocabulary to describe the life cycle of the Monarch butterflies (which they would already know in English), and at the same time they would be learning about an important tradition in Mexico.

Baker suggested that by reducing the content demands (the content students have already learned), the language demands can be increased, and students can focus on building their language proficiency.

Other ideas Baker and Guadalupe discussed to enhance Spanish language instruction include building student vocabulary “with simple but engaging games and activities that can help students read and write books in Spanish,” described Baker. “I look forward to the continued collaboration with Lamplighter and supporting their efforts to teach children Spanish, the second most widely spoken language in the world,” she smiled.

Guadalupe agreed and said the collaboration with Dr. Baker has been particularly beneficial for the School’s Spanish program. “Professor Baker has extensive experience with assessment tools and the developing of language as well as reading programs.” She said Baker understands teaching and language acquisition well; therefore, “working with her has been not only rewarding but also engaging.”

Baker, who was born in Brazil, grew up in Colombia and Mexico. The highly credentialed professor has also provided professional development and consultation to parents, teachers, and researchers in Chile, Argentina, Mexico, and Spain.

Assessing the partnership, Raney suggested that “most schools do not have access to such professionals.” She is encouraged that Lamplighter faculty understands “what a privilege it is to have these professors just a quick drive, phone call, or an email away.”

Dr. Al Otaiba concurred, “Our College of Education team enjoys working in partnership with Lamplighter teachers. There are tremendous reciprocal benefits and we hope that this may also lead to some research initiatives.”

Next on tap is expanding the partnership to include the School’s early childhood division. Judith Mullens, director of the EC program at Lamplighter, said she is “looking forward to professional development opportunities” with SMU professors of Early Childhood Development and Education. Stay tuned for more about this ever-developing “higher education” partnership.

In this continuing section, LampPost illustrates the ways our accomplished faculty teach, engage, inspire, and mentor as they deliver serious education wrapped in the wonder of childhood. In this issue, we feature the amazing photography of Mattingly Award winner and Spanish teacher Jezabel Guadalupe; the continued devotion of Habitat for Humanity volunteer and early childhood teacher Debbie Herskovitz; the commitment to science education by Lamplighter’s Perot Museum of Nature and Science coordinator Gretchen Pollom; the dedication to professional development and higher learning of early childhood director Judith Mullens, school counselor Jill Wiedman, and teachers Hannah Brown and Cheryl Shulman; and a warm Lamplighter welcome to new teachers Lauren Hardage, Maggie Fulton, Kate Mouchet, and Rachel Gutierrez.
Romanian landscape by Mattingly Award winner Jezabel Guadalupe
This summer I had the extraordinary opportunity of exploring and photographing some parts of a special country called Romania in southeastern Europe. Being able to explore and photograph ancient fortified churches, wooden churches, markets, cemeteries, artisans, and private houses, as well as its beautiful people was a true delight.

My first stop was in the region of Maramures, one of the farthest regions of the European Union. Villages in the mesmerizing Maramures region where people preserve old ways of life seem to be untouched by modern times. Shepherds, horse-drawn carts, unspoiled large pasture fields, hens clucking, large wood-carved gates, wood barns, and dirt roads are simply the norm in this breathtaking region.

The second destination on my trip was the Transylvania region in central Romania. This region is home to well-preserved medieval Saxon towns such as Sighisoara and fortified churches such as the 14th century one in Biertan. Transylvania’s large towns in the summer are busy with locals and tourists, but easy to navigate on its cobbled streets. Small villages in the region are quiet throughout the day, but also full of excitement and charm.

Last on my visit was the capital, Bucharest. Bucharest is the largest city in the country and also its cultural, industrial, and financial center. It is modern, old, accessible, and safe. An important element about the city is that landmarks appear to be always close in distance. You will notice people walking everywhere. Historical and Communist-era architecture surrounds you. Coffee shops, bookstores, churches, and museums are available to you on almost every street of the centru (Romanian for town center). Bucharest is also home to the largest civil structure, named the People’s Palace, an impressive multi-purpose building constructed during the Communist era.

Romania is a country of contrasts, rural and modern. It is a place that resembles a fairy tale, a place worth visiting, photographing, and enjoying. After exploring this unique and inspiring country, I felt extremely fortunate and accomplished: fortunate for having visited this wonderful place and accomplished for being able to capture it with pictures. I am currently working to complete a photographic essay of my experience, all thanks to the Mattingly fund!

Who knew that being awarded the Pat Mattingly Fund three years ago would have changed my life? It was 2011 when I was given the grant to attend a global Habitat for Humanity build in Fiji, and my view of the world expanded exponentially. At the end of this summer, I returned from Portugal where I had completed my third Global Village Habitat for Humanity build. I was there for almost two weeks rehabilitating an 80-year-old stone house for a single mother with three children. I worked alongside 16 people of different ages and backgrounds from across the United States. I love traveling and learning about diverse cultures along with meeting new and interesting people on these global builds.

I also volunteer with Habitat for Humanity locally in Dallas with my two boys, Jake and Mitchell. I hope that I have instilled in my children the importance of community service and the love of helping others less fortunate. Habitat’s mission is to have “a world where everyone has a decent place to live.” We are so lucky to have that and so much more. Every week I check the Habitat for Humanity calendar for dates and locations for my next global build. I can’t wait; where will I go next?
Early Engineering

Taking the “E” from STEM is the focus of a new Night Light class

By Gretchen Pollom, Lamplighter’s Perot Museum of Nature and Science Coordinator

Children love to build, design, and create things. This happens at an early age while stacking cups, creating forts with pillows, using cardboard boxes to make houses and wood blocks to make towers, and turning Duplo Legos into simple machines and space ships. The more traditional Lego sets are equally fun for children and parents, but we often have different agendas: parents want to complete the project and display the tidy creations; children use the same opportunity to practice step-by-step directions, but the work does not stop there. When we are quiet, we will hear creative play at work. The characters come to life! When a Lego set breaks, as it will inevitably do, the same Lego pieces are reimagined as something new. This is when the creative juices flow.

Children use household items like paper clips, coins, balloons, tape, glue, paper, cardboard, scissors, egg cartons, paper towel holders, plastic bottles, and bottle caps to make new things. Open spaces stocked with these common items are great laboratories for curious minds.

Taking the “E” from STEM and using “engineering” as the focus for a new Night Light class is a logical next step for the inventive and curious students at Lamplighter. Students will brainstorm, plan, design, test, and share results related to their projects. Examples of some of the projects are creating a super bouncy ball out of a balloon, designing a parachute for a safe landing, building an instrument for measuring wind speed, designing a windmill that lifts weight, and creating something that will solve a problem. The more opportunities children have to ask questions, brainstorm ideas, design and build prototypes, test, redesign, and share their results, the more comfortable they will be in solving real-world problems.

At the Perot Museum of Nature and Science, the Engineering Hall is a favorite of many children. For example, children can build a sturdy bridge for cars to drive across and design a building that can withstand an earthquake, both of which are important responsibilities of an engineer. Children delight in the “Build It Garage.” They design, test, and redesign their own cars, airplanes, rockets, and catapults. Lamplighter students will “build it” this Fall in “E is for Engineering.”

Exercising Options

PE and Science Teachers collaborate

By Gretchen Pollom, Lamplighter’s Perot Museum of Nature and Science Coordinator

Last spring, teachers April Seeds and Bill Burton and I planned and taught a kindergarten lesson based on the Pitsco “STEM in the Gym” unit. This fall, we used our experiences and results to write a paper that we submitted to the magazine Science and Children. As many in the Lamplighter community know, Bill has written several articles that were published in or are in the pipeline for Science and Children. With Bill’s guidance, we developed a cross-curricular science and PE lesson focused on developing gross motor skills while reinforcing the kindergarten students’ understanding of simple machines and force.

Our first step in planning the lesson involved creating an overall vision for the students’ experience. We designed five stations that worked large muscle groups in the arms, legs, upper back, and core. The stations were set up with scooters, force plates, pulley systems, gears, wheels and axles, buckets, and balls.

Our second step involved implementing and documenting the lesson. Each student had the opportunity to use the simple machine(s) at each station, to observe how machines made the work easier, and to compare and contrast how changing variables (e.g., the amount of force exerted) affected the experiment. Students used wheels and axles on the scooters and pulley systems attached to the wall to move one another across the floor; they used a gear and rope system to pull a scooter across the floor; and a brick-filled bucket was lifted off the floor using a pulley system. Finally, two stations were set up using force plates to measure the amount of force exerted when pushing off the wall or bouncing a ball.

Our last step involved assessing the work, collecting photos, and writing the paper. This step taught us the most valuable lessons of the experience: what worked, what we would do differently, and what other opportunities exist for a PE and science “connection.” The students enjoyed the experience as evidenced by their reactions during the PE class.
Oh, the Places You’ll Go!

By Judith Mullens, Director of Early Childhood

“You have brains in your head. You have feet in your shoes. You can steer yourself any direction you choose. You’re on your own. And you know what you know. And YOU are the one who’ll decide where to go...” – Dr. Seuss

This summer, two colleagues from Lamplighter’s Early Childhood division did just that: they packed up their suitcases and flew off to New York City at the end of June for one week of intensive training at Columbia University Teachers College Reading & Writing Project (TCRWP) to learn more about teaching reading and writing from some of the greatest educators and authors in America and from around the world today. Because of Lamplighter’s commitment to a robust professional development program, each year teachers are able to turn their dreams into reality thereby greatly enriching the learning experiences of their students.

This summer, Lamplighter faculty brought back new ideas and inspiration from David Booth, Professor Emeritus in Education at the University of Toronto; Lucy Calkins, Founding Director of TCRWP and author of numerous books on reading, including one of the top 10 New York Times best-selling educational books, Pathways to the Common Core; Kathy Collins, author of Growing Readers: Units of Study in the Primary Classroom; Mary Ehrenworth, co-author of Investigative Journalism and Position Papers: Research and Argument; and Jacqueline Woodson, author of the Coretta Scott King Award-winning book, Miracle’s Boys and The Other Side.

The week flew by as teachers became students again: they went to incredibly rich classes; shared their insights and learning in small groups; attended lectures that made them cry, laugh, and think hard; and stayed up late doing their homework. On the last day, with suitcases in hand, Lamplighter faculty took one last trip around the corner to the Bank Street Bookstore in Morningside Heights to drink in the titles and illustrations of some of the best children’s books available today. All of this was packed up neatly inside the minds and hearts of these two educators and safely brought back to the students at Lamplighter. What a dream, what a gift.

Thank you, Lamplighter, for making things that seem impossible, real.

In Search of a Love of Reading

By Hannah Brown, Kindergarten Teacher

During the summer reading and writing workshop at Columbia University Teachers College in New York City, learning went well beyond the material presented by the workshop professors. I networked with teachers from other states and countries, heard from various speakers, such as the author of The Other Side; and had time to reflect and learn from supplemental readings during the evening hours.

After hearing Jacqueline Woodson read her new book, The Other Side, I was moved to try to read picture books in the same way that our children read their books—by reading the pictures first. I learned that as adults, we forget how meaningful and magical the illustrations are in the books we read. I was challenged through Woodson’s lecture to read the pictures before I begin to look at the words with my students. This will help our youngest readers by helping them experience every part of the story. Picture books are again as special to me as they were when I was 5 years old.

The week at Columbia University Teachers College Reading and Writing Project gave me new insight and strategies to enrich and strengthen our reading program. Through featured authors and classic books, students will hear robust vocabulary while they are transported to other places that challenge their imagination and encourage curiosity. In our kindergarten classrooms, you will find our youngest independent readers are confident and proud of themselves, but the most important thing you will find are our students developing a love of reading.

Growing with Gesell
Faculty members attend Gesell Development Observation Workshop

By teacher Cheryl Shulman and school counselor Jill Wiedman

Gesell’s theory is known as maturational-developmental. It is the foundation of nearly every other theory of human development that came after Gesell’s. Early in the 20th century, Dr. Gesell observed and documented patterns in the way children develop, showing that all children go through similar and predictable sequences, though each child moves through these sequences at his or her own rate or pace.

At Lamplighter, we frequently use the GDO in early childhood. The data we gather is always useful and is a piece of the puzzle when making decisions and understanding where a child is developmentally versus chronologically. Some information for this article was found at http://www.gesellinstitute.org/

Freshmen Faculty
Lamplighter welcomes four new teachers

Lower School teacher Maggie Fulton comes from a family of educators. Two of her sisters are teachers, and her grandfather was the founder of Greenhill School, from which she graduated. Ms. Fulton has a Bachelor of Science in Early Childhood Education and a Master’s in Elementary Education from Texas Christian University. She taught two years in Frisco ISD and now teaches first grade.

YOUNG ALUMNI HELP LAMPLIGHTER SHINE

Lamplighter’s young alumni sponsored their fourth annual Car Wash last May. Contributions from the successful fundraiser will be applied to the School’s Land Fund. The Car Wash, started in 2011, has evolved into “an exciting and enjoyable event,” said Dr. Joan Hill, Lamplighter’s Head of School.

The event was an overwhelming success, according to organizing committee members. About 80 cars were washed by more than 30 volunteers. The committee, made up of high school alumni, directed the well-organized fundraiser. The seven members, who met monthly prior to Saturday’s event, are currently in Upper School. The group included Lamplighter graduates George and Katherine Dau, Joe Durst, Meredith Hessel, Jack Kraus, Whit and Katie Payne, and Jared Steinhart.

Director Advances

In the spring of 2014 Lamplighter’s Director of Advancement, Sandy Diamond, was granted the CFRE (Certified Fund Raising Executive) credential. Diamond joins over 5,000 professionals around the world who hold the CFRE designation.

To achieve this designation, CFRE candidates must meet a series of standards set by CFRE International which include tenure in the profession, education, demonstrated fundraising achievement, and a commitment to not-for-profit organizations. They must also pass a rigorous written examination testing the knowledge, skills, and abilities required of a fundraising executive and agree to uphold Accountability Standards and the Donor Bill of Rights.

Please join us in congratulating Sandy!

2014-2015 Annual Fund

The Annual Fund is the highest fundraising priority at The Lamplighter School. Providing direct funding for educational initiatives and operational enhancements that tuition alone does not cover, every dollar of this essential fund supports the mission of Lamplighter - igniting the potential of each child.

Annual Fund dollars enhance children’s educational experiences by:
• Ensuring professional development opportunities for faculty and staff
• Providing state of the art technology
• Acquiring current curriculum materials
• Supporting student enrichment with innovative programs and partnerships

A successful Annual Fund depends on participation from every member of our school community. 100% of trustees, faculty and staff supported last year’s drive. 100% parent participation is always the goal of the Annual Fund, as well as increased participation from grandparents, alumni parents, alumni and friends.

Be the spark... that inspires the joy of learning.
Dear Lamplighter Community,

2013–2014 was an especially strong year for Lamplighter. Dedicated volunteers worked tirelessly, and generous donors strengthened opportunities for our students and teachers. It was incredibly gratifying to see Trustees, Life Trustees, parents, grandparents, alumni, alumni parents, faculty and staff members, and friends of the school come together to continue to invest in Lamplighter’s mission.

The year just past was filled with numerous accomplishments, a few of which are highlighted below:

- Annual Fund Chair Catie Enrico led an outstanding Annual Fund campaign breaking school records by raising over $575,600. The faculty and staff achieved 100% participation in just four days before the start of the school year, and parent participation remained high with 95% participation.

- Courtney Plumlee provided outstanding leadership of the Lamplighter Parents Association. Countless hours of volunteer time, skills, and creativity added depth to our programs while building a strong, cohesive parent community. Auction Chair Shannon Morse, along with Co-Chairs Brenna Lambert, Karen Lobdell, Selwyn Rayzor, and Laura Trubey, created a most memorable community event, “King of the Road,” raising $283,880 for the Land Fund.

- Lamplighter grandparents were offered more opportunities than ever before to participate in campus events and activities. Joan Genender made substantial contributions in her role as Grandparent Chair, to educate and engage this important segment of the Lamplighter community.

- Lamplighter’s Alumni Association, led by Kyle Ford ’74, honored two beloved teachers, Sheila McCartor and Juli McGinnis, with the Lamplighter Spirit Award during Alumni Week. Over 150 alumni, faculty, family, and friends gathered to honor these two very special women.

- The work of the Pre-Campaign Task Force concluded after the Board accepted their recommendations last September. Following the work of the Task Force, an Architect Search Committee was assembled. Under the capable leadership of board member Leslie Krakow, the Committee conducted a nationwide search for an architect. After narrowing the number of firms throughout the spring, the Committee made a recommendation to the Board in late May.

Your support makes a significant and positive difference in the lives of Lamplighter children. Alumni parent and board member Jennifer Karol said it best: “It was Lamplighter that gave my children their strong foundation not only to love learning but to be caring, compassionate citizens of the world.”

Please accept my most heartfelt thanks for helping provide Lamplighter students a serious education wrapped in the wonder of childhood.

In Lamplighter Spirit,

Sandy Diamond

The Founders Legacy Society recognizes all donors who have chosen to support Lamplighter through planned gifts. The society honors the commitment of Lamplighter’s founders, Natalie Murray and Sandy Swain, whose vision, passion, love of children, and determination created a school where the spirit and joy of learning are ignited in young minds and hearts for a lifetime.

To become a member, simply inform the Advancement Office in writing that you have named the school as a beneficiary in your estate plans. It can be as simple as assigning a portion of your life insurance to Lamplighter or adding the school as a beneficiary in your will.

You can play a part in sustaining the legacy of our founders while securing the future of the school. Please call the Advancement Office if you are interested in discussing a planned gift or if you have questions about a planned gift.
